

Website Update!

Hi KKC Extended Family,

Today is Super Bowl Sunday, but since I'm not a die-hard football fan, I feel I can still get something else done today, instead of watching TV all day....

I had been delaying this second post of the year to give you an update of the website. But after spending a lot of time on it and watching videos and reading "how tos", I decided that: (1) the theme I was using for it wouldn't let me do what I wanted to do, and (2) I didn't have the required expertise and wasn't about to acquire it anytime soon.

So, I developed a scope of work and sent it out to three website companies in my area. One didn't respond, and another was much too expensive (about $10,000) for 10 pages. The third happened to be operated by a woman we know because our kids had gone to school together. She came back with a better price ($1500) and we talked several times and I decided to enlist her help. She will help redesign the website as well as give me training to be able to update it and make changes myself. We will also switch to another hosting site which should be cheaper in the long run.

I am in the process of going through all of the material I have, to see what content we can add to the website in addition to what is already there. So, if you have anything you think would be good to have on the website, please let me know.

One thing I did find was an old photograph from a prior reunion without any caption, so I do not recall off-hand any details of when it was taken (See Attached Photo). Any ideas? Are any of you in it?

More later....Thanks!

P.S. Be sure to follow the website (<http://kolb-kulp-culp.org>) as we get that developed and Facebook (<https://www.facebook.com/Kolb-Kulp-Culp-Family-Reunion-111440337655136>).

P.P.S. The original website Glenn Landis developed is now found under its own separate tab. I am currently working on the 'Library' tab and hope to place the Kulp Family Record Book and the annual reunion bulletins there. But I am running into a snag of how to best place the PDFs on the page, so if anyone has suggestions, I would appreciate it.
